

We consider the security of our systems a top priority, which is why we started the responsible disclosure policy. As of the past few weeks though, we have been unable to properly assess and act upon reports made by our users in a respectable time frame.

Therefore, we have put our bug bounty program temporarily on hold. We are currently working on refining our processes so that we can handle these reports in a more efficient way, after which the program will be opened again to the public.

We thank you for your understanding.
